Washington, DC – This week, Spitzberg Partners joined forces with Global Delaware and The Embassy of Spain to offer a panel discussion and networking session on blockchain for global business.

The panelists, a diverse set of experts from government, law, tech, and business sectors, engaged in conversation about separating the hype from substance, using blockchain to redefine supply chains, data security, and transactions, and deploying blockchain technology to deliver new, high value services.

Dr. Ulf Gartzke, speaker and Managing Partner at Spitzberg said: "There is strong growing interest to tap into blockchain technology among government agencies and NGOs, many of which we are delighted to have with us in the audience today. We look forward to seeing maturation and wider adoption of the innovative technology in 2018."

Following the discussion, speakers and attendees continued the conversation and exchanged ideas during the networking reception.
